THE CHALLENGE

The client needed a partner who could execute a phased curtain wall replacement with minimal disruption to an operational building. In Phase 1, half of the existing glazed aluminum curtain wall had to be carefully removed while preserving the structural integrity of the remainder. The success of this complex first phase led to an award for Phase 2, which required the same level of precision and coordination. Completing both phases under tight timelines and structural constraints demanded a trusted, capable partner.

OUR SOLUTION

As a recognized Top 50 Contract Glazier, St. Germain's brought strategic foresight to this project. Our team measured to unknown points and fabricated the curtain wall with minimal references. By working in sync with the framing team and incorporating allowances for field variances, we were able to move forward confidently with glass ordering and maintain momentum without compromising accuracy.

RESULTS ACCOMPLISHED

Thanks to our meticulous planning and experienced field crew, the project was completed with remarkable precision. Mismeasures were nearly eliminated, even with the inherent unknowns. The result was a clean, high-performing installation delivered on time—demonstrating why clients rely on us when precision and reliability matter most.
